Hear what alumni are saying about the program!

"I used to feel like a bystander in these conversations about race. I was cautiously curious but I wasn't willing to engage in the conversation, in the deeper conversations, because it made me feel uncomfortable. But, you have all given your voice, and all the readings have given me a voice, and the knowledge and understanding to have conversations about race with people in my life that I'm close with, and to challenge their perceptions, their misconceptions, and to hear each other."

"In the simplest of terms, the more my eyes were open to how deep systemic oppression... runs, specifically within schools, the more close I became to facing a personal existential crisis that could've left with me leaving education. So, with that being said, the work that we've started here together in equity has only pushed me more in the direction of hopefully never leaving this profession."

"I know that now more than ever, as educators, it's our responsibility to address racism and our personal biases, and examine our learned behavior."

"It has been one of the most valuable experiences in my life."

"This has been transformational, wonderful, a lot of work, but at the end of every discussion you feel so invigorated. It's been a fantastic experience!"

What has set this program apart from the others is that it has been so rooted in the world of academia in a way that has allowed me the opportunity to broaden my knowledge base and understanding of systems of oppression in order to begin the work of dismantling them."
